Aliens Always Subject to Deportation, Says the Supreme Court.

Washington.—Aliens who may have lived in the United States for years are still subject to deportation under the immigration law of 1907, should they visit their foreign homes, and within three years after returning to this country, engage in immoral practices, according to a decision by the Supreme Court in the case of Anna Lapina.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to see that there is at least one road to health that anyone has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hali's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hali's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for anyone that fails to cure. Send for testimonials.

STARTLING REPORTS CONTINUE TO APPEAR

Excitement in Fort Wayne Over Strange New Medicine Now Seems Greater Than Ever.

A special from Fort Wayne, Ind., the home of the now famous Root Juice medicine, says people of that city are more interested than ever in the strange liquid since its remarkable curative power became known throughout the country. Reports of cures which seem little short of miraculous are pouring into the company's headquarters. People who have suffered for years from indigestion, belching, pains after eating, headache, loss of appetite, nervousness, headache, dizzy spells, floating specks before the eyes, loss of sleep, painful, scanty or too frequent urination, biliousness, sallow complexion, constipation, impure blood, rheumatic pains, swelling, soreness, and other symptoms of stomach, liver, kidney and bowel disorders, claim to have regained their health in a most remarkable manner after using the medicine for a comparatively short time. One man who claimed to have suffered from backaches for thirty-five years, and who at times could not remove his clothing, says he is now free from pain. A lady who was helpless from rheumatism has been enabled to get up and walk without assistance and is now doing her own housework.

These are but samples of dozens of cases that have been reported.

The demonstration at the J. J. Wood & Son's drug store in this city has been a phenomenal success and many local sufferers have availed themselves of the opportunity to test this strange medicine that is doing so much for sick people wherever it is used.

Under the Snow

(By Dr. A. G. Browning of Maysville, Being a True Story Stranger Than Fiction.)

The exact geography in the premises is not essential; after all the years there be hearts yet vibrant and aching.

"Burn Brae" was an ideal home; upon life's highest plane, all about and within, was an atmosphere minus an atom of the vicious or impure. The lintels were justly immune to the faintest touch of care; the wings of peace embraced and sheltered all; the whole routine was a poem; its existence a benefaction.

The mantle of real men had fallen upon the worthy shoulders of Duncan MacLaren, the proud master; queen regent was a wife and mother, a jewel more priceless than the wealth of many seas; cashed and idolized was an only child, a son, "born in a cradle of gold with Fortunatus to rock it."

From youth, the heir to this goodly heritage fitted into his allotted niche with all the precision of right's unalterable rule; had circumstance failed a setting, nature would have stamped him a jewel. Whilst yet lisping, his recitations from the Scottish Bard, intimated in pathos and dialect, gained for him the life-long pseudonym of Robbie Burns.

"Twas away back when Time with me was young, and clouds, if any were silver-tipped and fleeting, that I became by quasi-adoption, an inmate of this charmed circle. Adoption, because at a period of which I knew nothing, Fate, long frowning upon my race seemingly relented and, kindly leading where there was no light, gave me needed place at the hearthstone of Burn Brae. Thus it was that Robbie Burns and I became foster-brothers. I was as much of the household, as freely participating in its fortunes as if co-heir to its broad acres. We grew to be one and inseparable, with rarely so much as a wish at variance, a real difference never. Boyhood flitted without a wound to feeling, or semblance of a scar. Real sorrow came only when, budding duties beckoning, we went each to his place on the fighting line of life's great battlefield. He early entered Harvard in preparation for the Law; I, in pursuit of such fortune as awaited me, drifted with the "forty miners" to distant California.

The old life was long kept fresh and green. But lapses finally came, as they must—grew, as they will. And then, with silence long unbroken, the curtain dropped upon the drama of two lives heretofore a unit. Not, unhappy, 'till there came conviction that basic principles were shifting, that the once pure stream was being poisoned at the fount. Entreaties by me, for himself, availed nothing were finally met by one cruel, bitter taunt, and Robbie Burns, with "a' he'd been to me," lapsed into sad memory.

where, in the by-gone time the broad avenues, like wide-open arms, gave aluring welcome; beneath and about the sturdy oak under whose shelter I'd made holiday—upon the very site of the old home, with upheaved turf and spectral shafts, all wrapped in a mantle of snow, was outlined to my bewildered vision, a City of the Dead!

"Twas a stunning metamorphosis! A withering waste of treasured memories! What mocking fiend had possessed and led me to this Dead Sea coast—this ghastly array of ruined vases, with no lingering scent of the rose, so cruel had been the destroying hand!

Automatically, I sought the desolated precincts and passed within. I felt alien to my native hearth—an intruder among the ghosts of my dead past! A sense of something tragic in this unwritten drama was coming to possess me. One cherished name upon chill but enduring granite, would be short of annihilation complete! But not one vestige remained! Void of visible sign as the virgin sod of unbroken prairie!

Disenthralled for the moment, a flood of recollections came trooping to me just here. Among them, that of a crystal spring at foot of the hill, west side, and away from view. In the golden time, this spring had been trained to feed a miniature lake whose margin, responsive, became a wilderness of shrubs and flowers—from whose limpid bosom arose a graceful fountain. A charming spot!

For reasons, this picture had been deeply graven on my memory.

I silently prayed it may have escaped obliteration, to me vandal, though making place for somebody's darlings.

But the measure for me was not yet full. "The little running brook was now dry." The tiny lake had vanished! Around was a waste, barren and cheerless as if sown in salt, that no green thing, with coming spring-time could ever grow again! In the dismal midst—alone, "forgotten" written in the reeling pose, was one hidden, moss-grown shaft of homely stone! In contrast with the sculptured marble all about, poverty was lined in its every curve. The symbolic willow seemed subject and apologetic; even the inscription was shy and receding but deciphered read:

AT REST.

DUNCAN M' LAREN.

MARY, HIS WIFE.

ROBBIE BURNS.

My mission, if ever existing, was ended. It isn't in words to express the abandon of utter annihilation! I sought the station for immediate return to my distant home; with just no wish beyond—with fading consciousness of all that had gone before. So that, when somehow deflected to the office of Doctor Blank, it seemed in accord, seemed the natural thing, did not antagonize. Not only so, but when he entered at my summons there was prompt mutual recognition: the matter-of-course feeling on my part was manifest on his; he wasn't just expecting—he wasn't seemingly surprised at seeing me.

Doctor Blank and I had been classmates, we were so close, deep in retrospect, with an interregnum of many years. Of all who were in a field, it developed that he

"DOUBLE SHUFFLE"

Old-Fashioned Negro Dance Captured Washington Society.

Washington.—Washington society has tired of the fish walk, the tango and other modern dances and turned with relief to the "double shuffle."

This variation of the old-fashioned negro dance, which has enlivened many a cabin and barn dance, now appears in the fashionable drawing rooms on Connecticut avenue.

The "double shuffle" was introduced here by members of the army and navy set, and the dancers at the hop at the Washington Barracks Friday were busy learning the new dance.

Weak Kidneys Often the Result of Overwork

On several occasions I have been unable to work and suffered severe pains in the back, due to my kidneys. I called on a doctor of Ripon, Wis., but received no relief.

I tried Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root which gave me instant relief. I was then able to resume work. Swamp-Root is the only relief I can get from kidney disease which I am subject to in the spring of the year. I am writing this testimonial through my own free will that sufferers of kidney and bladder diseases will know of the wonderful merits of Swamp-Root. I recommend Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root whenever I can and always have a bottle of Swamp-Root in my home.

I purchased Swamp-Root of Mr. C. J. Burnside, Druggist, of 202 Main street, Ripon, Wis.

Very truly yours,

THOMAS J. LYNCH, Ripon, Wis.

I have read the above statement that Thomas J. Lynch bought Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root at my store and made oath the above statement is true in substance and fact.
